the work at the project, getting to understand its doing problems, staying in my little house and walking around the farm - these things have always meant so much to me. I do care so very much, my beloved Musa, for all you are and do, and I would come from the ends of the earth to be with you for a little while if only I were fit to do so. Particularly now when your own health is far from good and so many disturbing things are happening all around you to make you anxious. Here in London the current Middle East negotiations are a constant cause for concern. I do not have much news because I have not been out much or seen any of our mutual friends recently. Indeed, my life in London has become so restricted that I am thinking of moving to my sister's house in Cambridge next year. Being now in my seventies it seems time to make the move. If I go there it would be nice if you could come and have a holiday at the Garden House hotel beside the river. I was so sad that you couldn't come to England this year. You are always in my prayers and thoughts and I send you much love. Your affectionate Sue.

My Dear Musa,

Please forgive me for having been so long in writing to you. It is not for lack of thinking of you. I do believe I think of you every day of my life. No, my delay in writing is really because I've been so reluctant to write a disappointing letter. The truth of the matter is that I've recently been far from well and am still not fit to travel out to stay with you. I've been so touched by your invitations and so deeply wanted to come and see you but have both car and digestive troubles that make it impossible. My doctor says I may not travel and I would not feel up to it anyhow. It is a bitter blow to me. For the weeks I have spent so regularly with you over the past seventeen years - and particularly since 1967 - have been such a precious part of my life. The quiet days with you at Teniche, sitting beside you, talking of old things and new, seeing
